Philosophy and Approach: My philosophy of counseling involves the underlying belief that people do well if they can, and can always learn new skills. Often times lagging or missing skills prevent optimal living and relationships. I believe that these areas of skill deficit can be identified and improved. This approach most directly aligns with the Collaborative Proactive Solutions model (CPS) developed by Dr. Ross Greene. This is an eclectic counseling approach integrating cognitive behavioral therapy, social learning theory, and person-centered therapy. My approach places individuals in the role of the expert thus fostering independence, confidence, and personal wellness. My aim is to promote insight and awareness into personal strengths while building and creating new areas of skill. My practices emphasize growing in insight, empathy, mindfulness, and self-management.

Formal Education and Training: I hold a master's degree in counseling from Northwest Christian University. Major course work emphasized clinical theory, advanced practical applications of counseling theory, personal evaluation, diagnosis, human development, crisis management, and career guidance. As part of my education I defended a master's thesis on Integrating Christian beliefs with cognitive behavioral therapy. I hold a post-graduate certification in foster and adoptive family therapy from Portland State University. I have also received training in Collaborative Proactive Solutions (CPS Model).

As a Licensee of the Oregon Board of Licensed Professional Counselors and Therapists, I abide by its code of ethics. To maintain my license I am required to participate in continuing education, taking classes dealing with subjects relevant to this profession.
